PREFACE

The publication of this volume of THE COMPENDIUM OF AMERICAN GENEALOGY marks the fourth milestone toward the completion of the Genealogical History of the American Nation in this Standard Genealogical Encyclopedia of The First Families of America.

A work of such large proportions will require many volumes of the size of this one, and will probably cover the span of two generations, but the progress achieved within the comparatively short period since the World War, out of which this work originated as a war measure, already gives it the distinction of having compiled and published a larger number of lineages than all the other general genealogical compilations combined during the first three hundred years of American history.

With more than 8,000 lineages in this volume added to the number published in Volumes I, II and III, a total of more than 29,000 lineages, and with the combined indexes listing upward of a quarter of a million names of ancestors, it is unquestionably the first reference and research source in American genealogy.

To those familiar with the earlier volumes the gradual change in the treatment of the subject matter from the rigid abridgment in the first volume to fuller and fuller data in each succeeding volume, will be apparent. While the broad scope and the reference character of the work place an arbitrary limitation upon the nature and volume of the data comprising each record and lineage, which limitation must be observed, nevertheless the change has become so marked in the present volume that the work is no longer the abridgment originally planned. Therefore, the strictly qualifying term "Abridged" has been eliminated from its title, and this volume is issued under its more nearly correct title, THE COMPENDIUM OF AMERICAN GENEALOGY.

For the benefit of those not familiar with the history of this work it may be stated that it had its inception in 1917 as a war measure. Participation in the World War by the United States made necessary a source of information for furnishing the lineages, with their inter-marriages, of large numbers of men and women who were engaged, or desired to participate, in the various war activities. The necessity for such information demonstrated the real need for an authoritative genealogical work of national character, one which could be accepted as the standard for the nation. Thus, this work was born of necessity to meet a crisis, and the names, files and voluminous data compiled during the war are the foundation upon which it is based.

The honor, and it is an honor, of formulating so great a national project, was assumed by the editors of this work, although the honor of formulating the project is overshadowed by the conviction that a national service is being rendered, and it is in this spirit that the work is being carried out.

A conception of the monumental task involved in this compilation may be had when it is realized that it required nearly seven years (1917-24) of most painstaking labor to complete Volume I, published in December, 1924. It contains over 5,000 records and upward of 10,000 lineages, comprising 1,148 pages.

Volume II, published in December, 1926, contains over 1,600 records and upward of 5,000 lineages, comprising 628 pages. In this volume effort was directed toward completeness of lineages rather than toward including a larger number of records, with the result that, in Volume I the records average 2 lineages, whereas in Volume II the records average about 3½ lineages.

Volume III, published in December, 1928, contains over 2,000 records and upward of 6,000 lineages, comprising 810 pages.

Volume IV, published in December, 1930, contains over 2,000 records and upward of 8,000 lineages, comprising 912 pages.

Additional volumes, each complete and independent in itself, will be issued annually. Suggestions of names, and data pertaining to them, will be thankfully received and accorded every consideration for inclusion in this work. However, the editors reserve the right to accept for publication or reject any data submitted to them at their discretion. The records in this work are included with only one view, to increase the usefulness of the work; no space has been paid for, nor can it be.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Sincere thanks are due to the many persons who have kindly loaned books and manuscripts which have assisted greatly in the production of this work, and also to many who have offered suggestions that materially aided in the solution of knotty problems. Especially are thanks due to officers and members of the hereditary-patriotic, genealogical and historical societies. Their hearty co-operation has been a constant source of encouragement, so that it may truly be said that courtesies received from them have contributed in a larger degree toward the completion of this volume than any other extraneous source.

EXPLANATION AND ANALYSIS OF RECORDS

While every person acquainted with genealogical usages and terms will readily understand the lineage records as they appear in this volume, an explanation is here given for the information of those not familiar with the subject.

Since no standardized system for recording American genealogies had been formulated at the time this work was projected it was found necessary to develop a style to conform to American genealogical usages and at the same time be clearly understandable by the lay researcher. It is gratifying to find that the system adopted for this work has met with general approval for its simplicity of style and clarity of presentation.

In numbering the generations in America it was found necessary to represent the subject of the record as number 1, and his parents as number 2, since under this system the lineages of both father and mother, not often equal in the number of generations, always conjoin in their common number 2. Thus, the subject is represented as number 1; his parents are always numbered 2; his grandparents in both lines of descent are always numbered 3; his great grandparents in both lines of descent are always numbered 4; and so on, to the earliest known ancestor in America, who is given the highest number, which shows the number of generations in America in each line of descent.

Confusion was also avoided under this method of numbering by eliminating the designation "10th from," or "5th from," as the case may be; the numbers, as given in the records, show clearly the number of generations in America and that the subject is a descendant OF the ancestors named; of course, he is also descended FROM the ancestors, but in a generation one number lower than that given the ancestors in the record.

Records are divided into sections or paragraphs, each one ending with a period, as follows: Name of the subject with place and date of birth. Paternal lineage of the father's surname (the main stem, or trunk line), from the earliest known ancestor in America down to the father (numbered 2). Collateral paternal lineage (if any), from the earliest known ancestor in America down to the generation in which it connects by intermarriage with the main stem. Maternal lineage of the mother's surname (the main stem, or trunk line), followed by collateral maternal lineage similar to the paternal. The names of the parents of the subject conjoined in their common number 2, followed by the names of their children numbered consecutively in the order of birth, and to whom married. Data of marriage of the subject (numbered 1), the children of this marriage, also numbered consecutively in the order of birth, with data of education, military service and marriage. Biography of the subject (numbered 1), ending with the present residence address.

It will be noted that the surname of the earliest ancestor, in each lineage, appears in Bold Face type; this is to emphasize that the following generations, whose Christian names only are given, are all of the same surname as the name in the Bold Face type unless, or until, the surname is changed by the marriage of a daughter, in which case her husband's name appears also in Bold Face type to emphasize the change in surname. In some records it will be noted that the surname changes frequently and every change is emphasized by Bold Face type.

Where the cross-reference (qv) appears after the name of an immigrant ancestor it is intended to refer the reader to the list of Immigrant Ancestors on pages 727-777 of this volume, where data pertaining to him will be found. This method was adopted in order to avoid frequent repetition of the identical data, and it permits the compilation of a comprehensive list of immigrant ancestors to all the colonies which, in itself, is a valuable genealogical and biographical contribution.

The double dates which will be found throughout the work in the earlier generations in the records are made necessary by the change from the Old Style to the New Style of reckoning of the beginning of the year. In 1563, France adopted January 1st as the beginning of the year. Scotland adopted January 1st in 1600, but it was not until 1752 that England adopted the same date. Before 1752 (when the year began March 25th), in the records of the colonies that followed the English custom, dates between January 1st and March 24th, inclusive, were often indicated by two consecutive years (1700/01), to be interpreted at the option of the reader, as conforming to the New, or to the Old Style. For example: February 22, 1700/01, meant February 22, 1700, if the year was considered in the Old Style, ending March 24; if considered in the New Style, ending December 31, it would be 1701. The last year of a double date corresponds to our present system of reckoning.

Hyphenated double dates, as 1700-01, indicate that the exact time of the event to which these years refer is not definitely known, but that it did occur during either of the years. When a period of years is hyphenated, as 1700-05, it indicates that the event referred to occurred between those years.

The latest volume of this series should always be consulted first because it contains corrections and amendments of lineages in the earlier volumes. However, the earlier volumes contain many thousands of lineages not reprinted in this volume and should be consulted for names not found in the index to this volume.
